Hugo Wildflower Program

Our community now has a wildflower program and committee. The purpose of the program and committee is to share information about its local wildflowers. Part of the program allows Hugo neighbors to publish for free photographs of Hugo wildflowers on our web site.

Shooting Star by Dan Peterson

The study of ethnobotany focuses on the relationship between humans and plants. For example, many plants were used by Native American Indians as food, medicine, shelter, clothing, transportation, and ceremonial objects. Shooting star flowers were used as ornaments by women and at dances. The flowers were also hung on baby baskets to make them sleepy, and the leaves and roots roasted in ashes and eaten.
